Junkies, Judges & Jail

Stephen D. Smith

Book Two in the gloriously comic but touching legal memoirs from 'the Rumpole of Rotherham' – criminal lawyer Steve Smith.

As 1983 draws to a close, the clients and associates of Wilford Smith Solicitors in Rotherham continue to produce equal measures of tragedy and farce. From career criminal Jack Heptonstall and his vast brood to manic insurance broker Sean Page, they're all bent on keeping Steve Smith's life interesting.

Starting with the accidental theft of a boa constrictor – along with twenty thousand cigarettes and a Ford Transit – Steve struggles with Fifi DuPont and various other exotically named hookers, a ragbag of crimes both petty and large, villains and victims of all shapes and sizes, and a double migration by the Heptonstall family, to name but a few. But true to form, he finds both humanity and humour in everything life throws at him, and distils it all for our rich enjoyment...

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

After entering the legal profession 'by default', Steve Smith worked his way up from office boy's junior assistant to co-founder of the criminal law firm Wilford Smith. A professional public speaker, Steve is gaining a growing reputation on the literary festival circuit, and for his two-man shows with Gervase Phinn. He is married with one daughter and lives in Rotherham.

Critical acclaim for the first book in the series, Boozers, Ballcocks & Bail

'In the tradition of James Herriot and countless other writers who have celebrated human values over gimmicky plotlines, this book shines with humour and warmth' – Good Book Guide

SALES POINTS

- 'The Rumpole of Rotherham' – The Times
- A word-of-mouth slowburner – the first in the series sold 8,000 copies
- Steve is building a reputation on the festival circuit – from the Daphne du Maurier festival in Cornwall to the Country Bookshop's festival in Derbyshire – and is available for events throughout the country – contact Susanne McDadd (Susanne@publishing-services.co.uk)
- Like the Ladies' Detective Agency, this book has a 'feelgood' factor and appeals to people of all ages and backgrounds
